

Devin Nunes warns Google may need to testify

by Daniel Chaitin |

 Devin Nunes-Examiner file

*Devin Nunes framed the issue as one in which tech monopolies "should be reined in."
(Graeme Jennings/Washington Examiner)*

House Intelligence Committee Chairman Devin Nunes said on Sunday there may be a need for Google to testify after the company's search engine showed results linking Republicans to "Nazism."

Speaking to Fox News on Sunday, the California Republican framed the issue as one in which tech monopolies "should be reined in" and called for a new search engine to compete against Google that doesn't "censor" conservatives.

"I think there's a free market solution here if somebody can compete with Google. If they can't, then ultimately we're looking at monopolies and then that brings in a whole other set of circumstances is — are these companies; Facebook, Twitter, Google, apple, etc.; are they monopolies and should they be reined in," Nunes said on "Sunday Morning Futures with Maria Bartiromo."

Sign up for breaking news alerts

Email Address

S

